

LET'S TALK ABOUT FOOD, FOOD, FOOD!!!

Food can be described using all five senses!

You see the food (The frosting on my cake is pink!)

You taste the food (This orange is sour!)

You feel the food (This jelly is very slippery!)

You smell the food (This mango smells very sweet!)

Sometimes you even hear the food (Do you hear the popcorn pop! pop! pop!?)

Choose your favorite foods and describe them using five senses below.

TURN THE PAGE. Draw your favorite food in the box 1. Write down one sentence describing the food using at least 2 senses from above. (Eg. Mango is very yellow and sweet.) Choose one person to interview about their favorite food! Ask them what their favorite food is and why they like it. Draw it in the box 2. Write down one sentence with at least 2 senses from above. (Eg. Potato chip is salty and crunchy.)

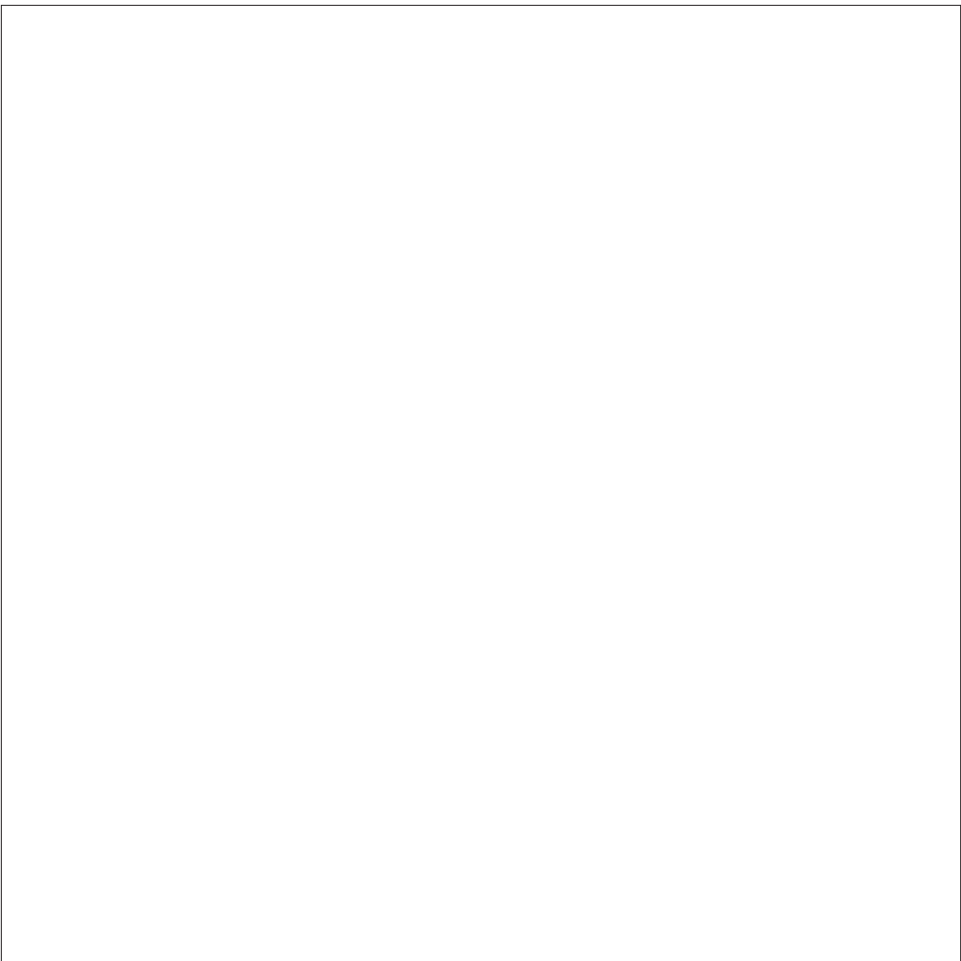

From the author:

I wrote and illustrated this book No Kimchi for Me!, partly inspired by my childhood experience of not wanting to eat spicy kimchi. Kimchi is a very common and popular pickled cabbage in Korea, but was too spicy for me when I was a kid. Guess what? Now I LOVE kimchi! It's spicy, crunchy, and refreshing. Yum!
